How does it work?

Qualified Medicaid Residents who reside in Nursing Home Facilities must pay what income they receive to the Facility each month. The amount they pay to the Facility is called the patient pay liability and is determined by the Medicaid office. In most cases, Residents can keep a small portion of their income as a personal needs allowance.

Qualified Medicaid Residents may also keep a portion of their income to pay for health insurance policies. These funds do not come out of their personal needs allowance. Since the insurance plans 360care offers qualify as an allowable deduction, most Residents can have their patient liability reduced by the amount of the insurance premiums. This means qualified Medicaid Residents may have all of these benefits covered by the insurance at no additional cost to them or to the Nursing Home Facility.
